Overnight service on SEPTA to start June 15

The facts

Trains will replace Nite Owl buses on weekends and holidays, including July 4th and Labor Day.

- The City Hall Courtyard will be closed as it usually is for late-night access.

- Riders should use the SEPTA stairways outside of City Hall to reach the late-night Market-Frankford and Broad Street lines.

- Maps and schedules are available at www.septa.org.

and Broad Street lines will remain operational from midnight to 5 a.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Trains will run every 20 minutes between midnight and 5 a.m.

The change will also affect cashiers. At high-trafficked stops, the cashiers will take fares at the turnstiles. But at the less-traveled stops, passengers are instructed to push through the turnstiles and pay the train operator, who is located in the train's first car. The train operators will accept tokens, cash fares, passes and will sell transfers, but not hand out change. Operators will not sell tokens.

SEPTA officials has also pledged increased police presence on all of the overnight trains.

The 24-7 service is not a new concept. Throughout the 1980s, the trains ran 24-7, but were replaced with the overnight NiteOwl bus service in 1991 due to low ridership.

SEPTA General Manager Joe Casey said that Philadelphia's demographics and populations have shifted in the last 20 years. "Now with all of the restaurants, increased late-night activity and people moving back into the city, we're excited to be able to provide this service that city, business leaders and customers have been asking us for."

SEPTA officials have budgeted between $100,000 and $200,000 to start the pilot program.

At the end of the pilot program, officials said they will evaluate ridership, costs and security issues, among other factors, and decide whether the 24-7 weekend subway service should be permanent.

broader medical marijuana reform by state lawmakers.

Dr. Howard Grossman, a co-chair of the group New York Physicians for Compassionate Care, pointed to a similar program in Maryland that he called “an abysmal failure.”

“New York should not go down that failed path,” he added.

The act, which passed the state Assembly last week, is under consideration by the Senate.

Cuomo framed the decision as a means to help kids forced to live with an untreatable ailment.

In March, Cuomo announced he would allow 20 hospitals to prescribe pot for patients approved by the Health Department.

Added protection

As of May 9, 2,100 buses have been retrofitted with dividers to protect drivers from attacks.

- Similarly, a GPS system installed in buses that allows MTA customers to track bus arrivals in real time can trip a silent alarm in emergencies.

both of those items are standing priorities for the transit authority and are on track to be completed long before the deadlines.

"We are already fully committed to installing partitions on all of our local buses by January 2017," said MTA spokesman Kevin Ortiz.

Obama defends swap to recover Sgt. Bergdahl

Criticism. He said his administration had told lawmakers earlier about a possible swap.

posed a new threat to U.S. security.

As Bergdahl emerges from five years of captivity, former comrades have accused him of walking away from his unit, prompting a manhunt that they say cost the lives of at least six fellow soldiers.

Obama rejected that as a reason for not doing the deal. "The United States has always had a pretty sacred rule, and that is we don't leave our men or women in uniform behind," he said.

President Barack Obama on Tuesday defended the deal to get U.S. Army Sergeant Bowe Bergdahl out of Taliban captivity, saying questions about the circumstances of the soldier's capture did not negate the need to bring him home.

Speaking at a press conference in Poland, he also said the United States would be able to "go after" the five Taliban prisoners who were released in exchange for Bergdahl if they

Terrorism. US revives group to fight homegrown extremists

The United States is re-establishing a law enforcement group to fight those it designates as domestic terrorists, the Department of Justice announced Tuesday.

Following hate-motivated shootings, such as the one at a Jewish Community Center in Kansas City, Missouri, in April, federal prosecutors have pressed the need to coordinate intelligence about such criminals on a national level, Justice Department officials told Reuters.

Holder said the Committee will not focus on Islamic extremist groups. / GETTY IMAGES

"We must also concern ourselves with the continued danger we face from individuals within our own borders who may be motivated by a variety of other causes from anti-government animus to racial prejudice," Attorney General Eric Holder said in announcing the group, named the Domestic Terrorism Executive Committee.

The committee's members will come from the FBI, the National Security Division of the Justice Department and the Attorney General's Advisory Committee, which includes representatives of federal prosecutors. REUTERS

Obama offers military help to wary Europe

Spooked. Eastern European allies are worried they could be next in Russia's sights.

President Barack Obama promised on Tuesday to beef up military support for eastern European members of the NATO alliance who fear they could be next in the firing line after the Kremlin's intervention in Ukraine.

Obama unveiled plans to spend up to $1 billion in supporting and training the armed forces of NATO states on Russia's borders.

The White House also said it would review permanent troop deployments in Europe in the light of the Ukraine crisis — though that fell short of a firm commitment to put troops on the ground that Poland and some of its neighbors had sought.

Stationing troops permanently in eastern Europe would be tricky: Many NATO members in Western Europe would balk at the cost, and a big increase in U.S. forces could prompt reciprocal steps by Moscow.

Obama was to meet Ukraine's President-elect Petro Poroshenko in Warsaw and will attend celebrations in France with Russian President Vladimir Putin on Friday to mark the 70th anniversary of the World War II D-Day landings. REUTERS

Tiananmen. China ups security, revisits deaths of 25 years ago

Armed Chinese police stand guard on Tiananmen Square in Beijing on June 3. / GETTY IMAGES

China defended the bloody 1989 crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators around Beijing's Tiananmen Square on Tuesday, the eve of the 25th anniversary, saying it had chosen the correct path for the sake of the people.

For the ruling Communist Party, the 1989 demonstrations that clogged Tiananmen Square in Beijing and spread to other cities remain taboo after the government termed the protests "counter-revolutionary."

The anniversary of the date on which troops shot their way into central Beijing in 1989 has never been publicly marked in mainland China, though every year there are commemorations in Hong Kong.

The government has never released a death toll for the crackdown, but estimates from human rights groups and witnesses range from several hundred to

"The Chinese government long ago reached a conclusion about the political turmoil at the end of the 1980s," said Foreign Ministry spokesman Hong Lei. "In the last three decades and more of reform and opening up, China's enormous achievements in social and economic development have received worldwide attention. ## More trouble. Aide alleges harassment in suit against Sterling

A lawsuit filed on Monday against Donald Sterling accuses the embattled Los Angeles Clippers owner of repeatedly subjecting a woman who worked for him to sexual demands and racist comments. Maiko Maya King's suit also claims Sterling ultimately fired her when she protested.

An attorney representing Sterling, Bobby Samini, rejected the assertions, according to the Los Angeles Times. "Anyone objectively reviewing Ms. King's claims will have no doubt that they are without merit," the newspaper quoted Samini as saying.

The lawsuit filed in Los Angeles Superior Court said

Sterling lobbed a "steady stream of racially and sexually offensive comments" at King, with whom he was in a "romantic relationship" from 2005 to 2011.

"He supported her financially and she worked for him and his foundation," the suit said. Also alleged is that she returned to work for Sterling for a second stint until he dismissed her over her protests in early May.

King, who is seeking unspecified compensatory damages, alleged that Sterling made sexual demands and withheld wages when she refused.

No answer yet on cause of plane crash

Investigators do not yet know what caused a deadly plane crash in Massachusetts on Saturday, though data pulled from the private jet's recorder show it crashed just 49 seconds after starting its ground roll.

The plane accelerated to about 190 miles per hour before braking and reversing thrust, according to National Transportation Safety Board Investigator Luke Schiada, who confirmed that the plane never got off the ground.

Philadelphia Inquirer co-owner Lewis Katz and six others were killed.

Schiada declined to say whether the new information indicated that the pilots may have tried to abort the flight. METRO

OMG! It's feral bushy facial fuzz

A new ad campaign for a furry face. / SCHICK

It could well be a new hipster trend to sculpt and cut critters into bushy bristles. But these "beastly" designs are in fact a part of New Zealand-based shaving company's Schick's #freeyourskin ad campaign aimed to encourage men to tame their unruly facial follicles. The Auckland-based Y&R advertising agency behind the photoshopped beards tells Metro why a man's "outer animal" needs to be kept under control.

Beards can look a little wild, but how did you come with this artsy animal style?

Being an ad agency, we're not short of creatives sporting unkept facial hair, most likely resulting from a lack of hygiene. When quizzed, they all confessed that their beards aren't actually that pleasant to live with. This led us to the insight that beards actually take on a persona of their own — a very clingy, irritating persona, much like a small pest.

Beards are in a bristling boom period right now, so why are you trying to ### get men to rein in their facial hair?

It's a funny thing, really. Beards are clearly very popular among the alternative hipster community. Ironically, most hipsters are now sporting matching beards and the trend has now caught on with the mainstream. It's just a matter of time before they hang up their expensive kale-infused beard waxes and pick up a Schick razor. Another reason to trim is that multiple studies have found that women actually find beards kinda gross.

It's been reported that women find beards more attractive because it creates greater symmetry and a stronger jaw line. So are the men with the feral facial hair getting much female attention?

Even Dolph Lundgren's jaw line would get lost under the beards our models are sporting. By trimming your facial hair back to a manageable length, perhaps the classic five o'clock shadow, you'll be able to groom it into a chiseled shape that would land you a part in any crappy '80s action film.

Florida judge, public defender fight after courtroom argument

A Florida judge is accused of punching an assistant public defender after telling him, "Stop pissing me off."

Video footage shows

Judge John Murphy challenging lawyer Andrew Weinstock to join him outside the courtroom to settle a dispute over the scheduling of a trial date.

"If you want to fight, let's go out back, and I'll just beat your ass," said County Judge John Murphy of Brevard County on the video.

Weinstock's boss, Public Defender Blaise Trettis, said the judge became angry because Weinstock refused to waive his client's constitutional right to a speedy trial. Under Florida law, defendants have the right to a trial within 90 days for a misdemeanor and 175 days for a felony.

"If I had a rock, I would throw it at you right now. Stop pissing me off. Just sit down," Murphy can be heard telling Weinstock on the video.

After Weinstock refused to sit or waive his client's rights, the judge issued his challenge. Weinstock can be seen on the video walking out of frame toward the courtroom's back door.

Jonah Hill has a homophobic moment

Jonah Hill got fed up with a photographer who was following him this weekend in L.A. The paparazzi reportedly mocked him, and that's when the actor exclaimed, "Suck my d—, you f—!"

That f-word we're censoring is not the one that's four letters long, but rather the homophobic one.

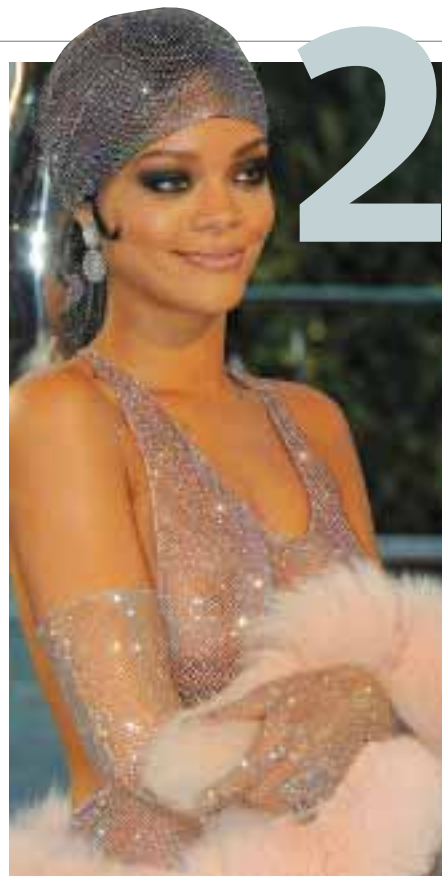

Hill, who's been known as a strong supporter of the LGBT community, went on "The Howard Stern Show" on Tuesday to offer his sincere apology for using the slur. "In that moment I said a disgusting word that does not at all reflect how I feel about any group of people. I grew up with gay family members. I'm leaving here to go spend the day with one of my closest co-workers and best friend, who is gay, who's getting married. I'm going to stand [with] at his wedding," Hill told Stern.

Rihanna shows her stuff, but it's nothing we haven't seen before

It's hardly news anymore when we see Rihanna's boobs, but it's still fascinating as heck, right? Rihanna attended the CFDA Fashion Awards in New York on Monday night in a dress that left nothing to the imagination. The see-through dress wasn't just partially see-through — it was full-frontal nudity! We're choosing to show side nudity though (with reflections from flash bulbs and her stole tastefully covering certain parts) because we're a family-oriented newspaper, d— it! Oops, we probably shouldn't say that last word then. Rihanna was, by the way, accepting the Fashion Icon Award.

Pitt talks attack

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Brad Pitt is finally breaking his silence about his red carpet run-in with Ukrainian prankster Vitalii Sediuk at the "Maleficent" premiere last week. "I was at the end of the line signing autographs, when out of the corner of my eye I saw someone stage-diving over the barrier at me," he tells People magazine in a statement. "I took a step back. This guy had latched onto my lapels. I looked down and the nutter was trying to bury his face in my crotch, so I cracked him twice in the back of the head — not too hard, but enough to get his attention because he did let go. I think he was then just grabbing for a handhold because the guys were on him, and he reached up and caught my glasses."

Comic to the 'Stars'

When you're watching a romance between two cancer-stricken teens unfold, you need some comic relief. In "The Fault In Our Stars" (out June 6), that comic relief is Nat Wolff.

In the movie — based on the best-selling book by John Green — Wolff plays Isaac, a teen going blind from eye cancer. But what devastates him more than his disease is that his hot girlfriend leaves him. OK, so a teen with eye cancer who gets dumped isn't exactly cheery, but Wolff's irreverence and funny one-liners make him stand out in this movie.

But it is depressing, and Wolff says he couldn't help getting upset during filming. "I thought I'd have the least heavy job, but then I realized it was way deeper and [more] upsetting than I thought it would be," he says. "[It was challenging] trying to find how Isaac was using humor to deflect his pain, but then I realized that's what the whole movie is about: dealing with pain in realistic ways."

Before he started filming, Wolff met a guy who was going through the exact predicament his character was going through: going blind and getting dumped. "I learned kids with cancer are just like anyone else. They're still getting dumped, they can still be a—holes. Or they can be great, but they aren't perfect. And they still want to have sex," he says.

Wolff also wore blinding contacts while filming and lived two days as though completely blind. "I put Tiger Balm on my toothbrush, which almost killed me," he says.

The small cast is especially protective of the love story they're telling, but Wolff hopes it affects moviegoers as much as it has affected him. "It's powerful. It shows how powerful love is. And even if you live a short life, you can live a full life."

How not to make a

Interview. Kelly Reichardt drew on Dostoyevsky and French heist films to direct "Night Moves."

"Night Moves," the latest from director Kelly Reichardt ("Wendy and Lucy," "Meek's Cutoff"), offers an intimate look into the lives of three radical environmentalists (played by Jesse Eisenberg, Dakota Fanning and Peter Sarsgaard) looking to blow up a hydroelectric dam as a form of protest. And it's quite a detailed look — though she stops short of actually explaining how to build a bomb.

Environmental issues seem to be popping up in films more and more, as the issue is clearly not going away. But it's been part of the conversation for a really long time. I can't remember when Earth First started, but people have been trying to lay their bodies down in front of bulldozers that are going to knock down trees for quite a while now, you know? But nevertheless, we were just really trying to make something that was today and just create a world, basically.

Where did the idea for the film come from?

My producer, Neil Kopp, was born and raised in Oregon, and Neil had grown up with a kid who had done something pretty radical that put him in jail for a while. ... But then, also I had just reread "Crime and Punishment," and we were drawn to this type of process film — like "Rififi" [the 1955 French heist film], where you take time out in the middle of a film to really show how something's done. That was really attractive to me: the small steps to get to something.

homemade bomb

Of course, when you're showing how people construct a bomb, you don't want to be too detailed.

Oh, you can go on the Internet and figure out how to build a bomb really quickly if you want, you know? For better or worse. [But] I don't think ours acts as a real how-to guide in any way.

You aren't naming types of charges or fuses, for example.

No, but you can Google Timothy McVeigh and find out everything you ever wanted to know, sadly, about building a bomb. ... My father was on the bomb squad for 20 years in Miami ... and I can remember being a teenager and some of my sister's friends stealing some of my dad's bomb-building books. The information's out there.

Shakespeare in the Park. Entry's free, but you need to know how to get in.

The Public Theater's Shakespeare in the Park kicked off Tuesday with "Much Ado About Nothing," directed by Jack O'Brien with park veterans Lily Rabe and Hamish Linklater. It will be followed later this summer with Daniel Sullivan's "King Lear," starring John Lithgow and Annette Bening.

Even the least patient Shakespeare viewers can't go wrong with a night under the stars watching some of the world's finest works while sipping a glass of wine — which you can bring from home!

The best part, of course, is that the entire affair is free. The only downside is that it makes getting tickets a little tricky. Don't despair! Here are a few ways you can get Shakespeare in the Park tickets:

1 Box office.

Every day, beginning at noon, tickets will be distributed at the Delacorte Theater (81st Street and Central Park West). While supplies last, each patron in line can pick up two tickets. The park itself opens at 6 a.m., and enthusiastic theatergoers traditionally arrive as early as sunrise to stake out places. Those 65 years old and up, along with disabled patrons, can wait in a separate line.

2 Virtual ticketing.

You can snag your spot from your cubicle at work by registering at Public Theater.org. You can enter the online lottery for two tickets every day between midnight and noon, at which time you'll be notified if you've won a seat at that night's performance. Pick up your ticket at the box office between 5 and 7 p.m. If you're late, your tickets will be released.

3 Standby.

If you happen to be hanging around the park, you can jump on the standby line. Any remaining seats are filled starting at 6 p.m. Fair warning: Many people hop straight from the box office line to the standby line, so the queue will be long by early afternoon. (Unclaimed tickets are also given out to standby at 7:30 — so if you have them, don't be late!)

4 Outer boroughs.

Can't make it uptown? You can still get a fair shot by visiting designated locations in all five boroughs, where limited tickets will be available on certain dates (two per person, only for that night's show). Find the complete list of venues at Metro.us.

Weather or not

When it rains

Worried about getting rained out after you spent all morning waiting in line? Shows are almost never canceled due to weather; when they are, it won't happen until 8 p.m. So plan to bring a poncho, arrive on time and take your seat. The storm might pass over by 8:15, but the show must go on!

5 Sponsorship.

There is one other way you can guarantee a seat: Make a donation of at least $200. Summer Supporters help keep the program running. Learn more at www.publictheater.org/support.

home office — whether you're a full-time telecommuter or just dabbling in flexible summer hours.

We hit up Philly-based interior designer Mel
McDaniel (www.melmc-danieldesign.com) for tips on setting up a productive, peaceful space.

Designate a space

No bedroom to spare? No problem. It's not crucial that you designate an entire room — just that you designate some room to be used strictly for business. "Closets, nooks, attics — if you need a home office, the space can be found," says McDaniel.

"Look carefully: Is there a large closet that could be converted into an office?
Is there a part of a room that would work with a space divider?"

Desk direction

A little feng shui goes a long way when it comes to your desk. "Never put a desk so that the person sitting at it has their back

By the numbers

2.6 percent of the U.S. workforce works primarily from home.

Hues

Color theory

One of the easiest ways to differentiate your office space from your living space is the paint scheme. "Don't be afraid of color," advises McDaniel. "Branch out from the main colors in your home — it will help create a different feel as you transition from the kitchen into your place of work."

Buyer beware

Time to buy? Only if you hurry

StreetEasy released its new monthly Manhattan Condo Market Report last week, and it came with some surprising news. Its index, the StreetEasy Condo Price Index, shows the largest monthly decrease since September 2010, with prices dropping 1.4 percent. You might not be able to break out your wallet quite yet, though. Prices are still way above where they were a year ago, and StreetEasy doesn't expect them to drop any more during May. The April change is a departure from the gains made across 2013 and into 2014, but may just be a sign that prices have hit their seasonal peak.

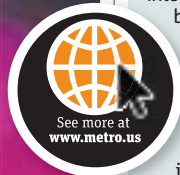

Unfortunately, despite the price decrease, inventory hasn't improved, and the options available are 2 percent below the levels of last year. Properties are generally only on the market for 49 days, which is a pretty speedy pace of turnover. It reflects a much higher number of interested parties than available units, and many hopeful buyers may be unable to find a condo, even if prices are better.

The price index is calculated by checking to see how much the same condos are sold for over time, and goes back to January 2000.

You can get a sitter (or premium cable) for the kids. But as for cats, well, they lounge where they please. Keep

Light the way

There's nothing less inspiring than cubicle farm fluorescents. If you're working on your own turf, soften things up overhead, then add additional task lighting near your desk. Pro tip: To free up space, McDaniel recommends ditching the desk lamp and going for wall-mounted fixtures.

$40M

What does $40 million buy? Take all the amenities below and amp them up: Think sprawling floor plans, large penthouses, sweeping views, high ceilings and massive terraces. The penthouse at 11 N. Moore St. in Tribeca, listed for $40 million, has a private elevator entrance, 3,168 square feet of outdoor space (with a private rooftop pool) and an entire master floor.

But in Manhattan, $40 million or more also can buy something invaluable: "A premium single-family townhome," said Serhant. "That's privacy."

For just $46 million, this place could be all yours. / PROVIDED

Double your budget, double your housing?

Price. Find out just how nice your apartment could be with a few million dollars more.

New York City is no stranger to multimillion-dollar home listings. A townhouse at 12 E. 69th St. going for $114 million — currently the city's most expensive listing, according to StreetEasy — nabbed headlines when it hit the market last year. Does that cash buy privacy, better amenities, greater space or simply bragging rights?

"Pricing is always a tricky thing to discuss," said Ryan Serhant of Nest Seekers International and the TV show, "Million Dollar Listing New York." "As objective as people want to make it, it's always a subjective thing."

What happens when you double the amount you're able to spend? Read on for our price breakdown.

$2.5M

For $2.5 million, you could buy a nearly 5,000-square-foot home on an ocean block in Manhattan Beach, Brooklyn — but in Manhattan, it won't go far. In fact, it's below the entry-level point of the luxury market, which is defined as the top 10 percent of co-op and condo sales.

According to a report from Douglas Elliman, in the first quarter of this year an apartment had to close for at least $3.7 million to be considered luxury.

What $2.5 million can nab the Manhattan buyer is a home in such neighborhoods as the Upper East Side, Midtown or Murray Hill, StreetEasy shows. Units closer to the ground are generally larger in bedroom, bathroom count and square footage than those located higher up.

Dream bigger

$20M

The $20 million mark builds upon the $10 million one. In the same high-profile buildings, buyers can move up the ladder in terms of size, finishes and views.

And if the views are protected (such as an apartment overlooking Central Park), that adds to the price, too, said Golubock.

When house hunters buy into branded buildings, what do they get inside the development? There's a 75-foot lap pool at 56 Leonard and 18 Gramercy Park residents get keys to Gramercy Park.

$5M

If you double your money to $5 million, you shouldn't double your expectations.

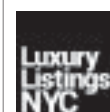

Roberta Golubock of Sotheby's International Realty said that for $5 million, a buyer can indeed buy a "nice" apartment inside of a luxury development, though it will be smaller or perhaps on a different floor. Increase the budget and you increase the luxury factor: Think higher ceilings, open views and a collection of high-quality amenities.

$10M

If your budget reaches eight figures, you're in the market for a truly nice pad. For those looking for a home on a higher floor, a larger amount of indoor and outdoor space, high-quality finishes and even a tony neighborhood, these factors come within reach.

Buyers pay a premium for these homes because they're in short supply around the city, Serhant said.

The $10 million threshold also buys residents into a brand: Think 15 Central Park West and 56 Leonard. ZACHARY KUSSIN

NYC housing honcho takes on affordability

Apartment. Alicia Glen is supervising one of the most ambitious housing projects in New York City ever.

David Belt, of development firm Macro Sea, was struggling last year to put together a deal for an 84,000-square-foot high-tech manufacturing center at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Belt needed to take advantage of a historic tax credit in order to make the project, dubbed the New Lab, pencil out financially.

After repeatedly hitting roadblocks, he asked for help from one of his partners on the deal, Goldman Sachs' Urban Investment Group, then led by Alicia Glen — the city's new deputy mayor for housing and economic development.

Goldman "helped me create a structure that would allow the tax credits to flow into my projects and allow me to complete my capital stack," Belt said.

They "rolled up their sleeves and did it," he said.

Now, Glen is tasked with a new challenge: Executing Mayor Bill de Blasio's goal of creating 200,000 units of affordable housing over the next decade — a cornerstone of his campaign promise to address inequality.

"Someone is going to go back and find a tablet from Moses saying there was a more ambitious plan out there," Glen said with characteristic wit during an interview with The Real Deal at City Hall last month. "But this is certainly the most ambitious plan by a city ever."

The target is 35,000 units more than what Mayor Michael Bloomberg achieved. It calls for preserving 120,000 affordable units and building 80,000 new ones at a cost of $41 billion, which will be paid for partly with $8.2 billion of city funds and about $30 billion in private capital.

"The challenge for us whenever we're spending a dollar of the city's money is to make sure we are appropriately filling the gap," she said. "We feel pretty strongly that given where

Mayor Bill de Blasio's $41 billion "Housing New York — A Five-Borough Ten-Year Plan," plans to build or preserve 200,000 apartments in the next decade. / GETTY IMAGES

In charge

- In her role as deputy mayor, Glen is overseeing 26 city agencies, boards and authorities and will have a say on issues ranging from rezonings to deciding which megaprojects the city takes on.

GLEN

- There's certainly precedent for Glen to play an outsized role. Daniel Doctoroff, Bloomberg's longest-serving deputy mayor for economic development, oversaw the creation of 130 million square feet of real estate, and became something of a household name for his spirited — though ultimately unsuccessful — push for a football stadium on Manhattan's Far West Side.

equity and debt markets are, we should be able to leverage our dollars significantly more than at other points in history."

Developers, she said, will also be asked to "put a little more skin in the game," noting that the private funds will include equity investments from developers and commercial debt from the lenders.

Running. The right shoes will help you go the distance.

It feels like runners are suddenly everywhere, in bright colors along sidewalks and all over the parks. But instead of dodging them, how about joining them?

Today is National Running Day, and there are few easier ways to get fit than lacing up a pair of kicks and taking to the streets. "It's almost like, why aren't you running?" jokes Giovanni Jimenez, a manager at Brooklyn Running Co. "I don't think [racing] has a lot to do with our sport anymore; you have a lot of people participating."

While the convenient thing about running is that you can do it pretty much anywhere, not every shoe is created equal. We asked Jimenez what's best on various city terrains.

Asphalt

Streets and paved paths call for something "soft and squishy that you can manipulate" with a feeling "like stepping into cake." Every brand has a signature feel: "It's sort of like picking your own mattress," Jimenez says. "Which one is more comfortable?"

Trail

"I would pay attention to the tread on the shoe," Jimenez suggests. Lightweight trail shoes that can dig into the dirt a little better are ideal; think road vs. mountain tires on a bike. Nike's waffle tread is iconic for a reason. Try the Nike Zoom Terra Kiger ($125), "a good example of a true trail shoe." If you want to go way off the beaten path, consider Inov-8, a British company that's a darling of the CrossFit movement.

Long distance

The Brooks Running Glycerin 12 ($150) has "a ton of cushion," and the newest model has shed nearly an ounce of weight. The shoe has what Brooks calls an "ideal pressure zone" to distribute shock evenly along the foot for maximum absorption.

BROOKS RUNNING
GLYCERIN 12 ($150)

Treadmill

Indoor running has its benefits. "You're already removing a ton of the impact. You're not running on the asphalt; that treadmill is going to flex a little bit," Jimenez says. Opt for a "nice little racing flat or lightweight trainer" like the Mizuno Wave Sayonara ($120).

Expert advice

Get the right fit

Going into a running-centered store can feel intimidating, acknowledges Matthew Rosetti, co-founder of Brooklyn Running. But the equipment and expertise can help you not just find the right shoe, but one that heads off potential problems.

"You can develop some repetitive-stress injuries as a result of imbalances," he says. Brooklyn Running's experts ask about a runner's habits, injury history and then assess gait. "We're not doctors; we don't believe any piece of footwear can be truly corrective," Rosetti says. "But it's a good start."

New coal regulations will hurt the poor, cost jobs

Following the huge increase in U.S. production of natural gas from shale, electricity from coal has already dropped from 50 to 37 percent of the total, which pleases environmentalists.

Why then does President Obama now introduce a carbon dioxide regulation against coal plants which the Chamber of Commerce says will cost $50 billion and kill jobs at a time when many Americans are still struggling to find work?

He does this on the basis of a Clean Air Act from the 1970s, which was not intended to regulate carbon dioxide.

Obama laments the increasing disparity between rich and poor in the U.S., but his regulation will cause increased electricity rates, which would hurt the poor much more than the rich.

England has a carbon dioxide tax and the London Spectator has said that there have been many winter deaths among the elderly because they cannot pay the high energy cost.

During the period of comment, I hope Americans will speak out against this unwise and unnecessary regulation.

STAND-IN

When the Rangers shipped Ryan Callahan to Tampa Bay, Brad Richards became the de facto captain. / GETTY IMAGES

NHL playoffs. Brad Richards is acting like a captain on this Cup run.

It was around 11:30 p.m. after Game 6 of the Eastern Conference finals, and Henrik Lundqvist had just finished speaking in eloquent terms about reaching the Stanley Cup Final for the first time in his career.

Standing to his right was Brad Richards.

Lundqvist took two steps to his left, and Richards took the dais. He shifted for a moment, motioned toward his goaltender, then deadpanned, "Yeah, same thing," as a press conference filled with journalists, team and league executives dissolved into laughter.

It was a lighthearted moment that would not have happened in the truncated 2013 season but is apropos now that Richards has essentially captained the Rangers to the franchise's first Stanley Cup Final since 1994.

Two days after the 2013 season ended, Richards was engulfed by media at the Rangers' training facility, vowing he would improve as he dismissed talk about being a compliance buyout.

Hiring the even-keeled

By the numbers

11

The Rangers have 11 pending free agents and despite Richards' recent success, he may still be amnestied after the season.

Alain Vigneault to replace the volcanic John Tortorella would have meant little if Richards hadn't spent the offseason training with Martin St. Louis in Connecticut.

Richards arrived with a fresh outlook to a camp. Instead of the stifling system Tortorella preached, Vigneault implemented a style in which speed, depth and puck possession was valued.

Richards, among others, has benefited from the seismic change. Centering Hagelin and St. Louis — acquired at the trade deadline for captain Ryan Callahan — Richards recorded 51 points in 82 games, and has been one of the Rangers' best players in the Stanley Cup playoffs, tallying 11 points in 20 games.

"He's been terrific," Sather told reporters Tuesday. "I mean, he's acting as the captain right now. He's certainly a leader in the room. He's been a leader on the ice."

Pivotal matchup near the net

The Kings' size often leads to traffic down low and behind the goal line, opening up shooting lanes for Drew Doughty.

Doughty:

The Kings defenseman, or second- and third-line defensemen Slava Voynov and Alec Martinez, mans the point at the top and fires in shots on goal.

The scrum:

The Kings will pack the area around Henrik Lundqvist and try to create traffic with players like 6-foot-3 Anze Kopitar. A tip-in by Tyler Tofolli on a Martinez shot gave L.A. the game-winning goal against the Blackhawks in Game 7.

REGGIE JACKSON:
L.A.'S NIGHTMARE

GETTY IMAGES

Los Angeles and New York have always had a rivalry. But it's been quite awhile since the two cities met in a title series in any of the four major sports. Metro takes a look at some of the history.

- 1981: Yankees vs. Dodgers (4-2) — The last time the two cities met in a championship was 33 years ago. And despite home-field advantage and wins in Games 1 and 2, things did not work out well for New York. Momentum swung on a brutal 2-1 loss in Game 5 when Ron Guidry allowed two seventh-inning home runs.

- 1977: Yankees (4-2) vs. Dodgers — The same teams met four years earlier with the Yankees getting the upper hand. You probably remember Reggie Jackson's three-homer Game 6.

- 1973: Knicks (4-1) vs. Lakers — It's been a long time since the Knicks won a championship. The Lakers, led by 30 points from Gail Goodrich, took Game 1. They never won again. Walt Frazier took MVP honors with 16.4 points and 9.2 rebounds per game.

- 1972: Knicks vs. Lakers (4-1) — Previous year, but a different story. Lakers center Wilt Chamberlain ran roughshod over the Knicks with an absurd 19.4 points and 23.2 rebounds per game.

- 1963: Yankees vs. Dodgers (4-0) — That Sandy Koufax fellow, winner of Games 1 and 4 was pretty darn good, wasn't he?

10 Storylines to watch in the Stanley Cup

Rangers fans don't get many opportunities to watch the Kings with them playing on the West Coast during the season. But Metro is here to help.

You likely know the team won the Stanley Cup in 2012 — and maybe even relished it after they the Devils days after the Rangers were eliminated in the Eastern Conference finals. But now the Blueshirts are on the opposite side.

From the names you need to know — like Drew Doughty and Jonathan Quick — to how the Rangers can step up and win their first Cup since 1994, we break down the top storylines for the 2014 Stanley Cup Final.

MARK OSBORNE

NASH HAS NEVER PLAYED IN A STANLEY CUP.

The vet

Rick Nash's lack of a Stanley Cup opportunity has largely been overshadowed by Lundqvist's pursuit of his first Cup. He's been overshadowed in his play as well. But after a 14-game goal drought at the start of the playoffs, he has 10 points in 20 playoff games, which isn't bad. It's just not star-worthy.

Kopi-who?

The biggest star in the NHL is unquestionably the Penguins' Sidney Crosby. So why was the best player in the postseason Anze Kopitar?

The Kings center is about as under the radar of a tremendous player as you'll get in any sport. Kopitar is the leading scorer in the playoffs (24) and not just because he's played 21 games. Kopitar finished fourth in the league in plus/minus this regular season (plus-34). And the bad news for the Rangers is he's actually off his regular-season pace in goal scoring this postseason.

ANZE KOPITAR ALREADY HAS FOUR MORE POINTS IN 2014 THAN HE HAD IN THE ENTIRE 2012 STANLEY CUP RUN.

Getting to know Drew

Ask any Rangers fan who the best defenseman in the NHL is and they'll likely tell you Ryan McDonagh. He's certainly in the conversation, but so is Kings star Drew Doughty.

The 24-year-old plays a similar game to the Rangers' McDonagh — at 6-feet he's not an enforcer — but he is even better on offense. He has 12 assists this postseason. Oh, and he already has a Stanley Cup and two Olympic gold medals to his name.

JONATHAN QUICK MAY BE BETTER KNOWN TO RANGERS FANS AS TEAM USA'S GOALTENDER.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Quick vs. The King

The 2014 Stanley Cup has more battling kings than an episode of "Game of Thrones." Henrik Lundqvist might meet his match in Jonathan Quick. The 28-year-old has the one piece of hardware Lundqvist does not — a Stanley Cup. None of the trio of Steve Mason, Marc-Andre Fleury or Dustin Tokarski are nearly as good as Quick.

Speed ...

The Rangers know they have a decided speed advantage over the Kings. Chris Kreider, Mats Zuccarello, Carl Hagelin and Martin St. Louis are all total burners on the ice.

After Montreal's P.K. Subban made the Bruins look silly in the Eastern Conference semifinals, Kreider did the same to Subban in the finals. He routinely beat Subban, and any other defender unlucky enough to be matched up with him in open ice, to the puck. Never was that more apparent than in Game

KREIDER HAS FOUR GOALS IN THIS POSTSEASON.

1 against the Canadiens when he charged down ice multiple times for one-on-one chances against Tokarski.

Kreider may be the most important player for the Rangers in the Stanley Cup, because he brings size as well as speed.

Sutter yourself

Kings head coach Darryl Sutter is the very definition of a hockey lifer. He spent eight years with the Blackhawks as a solid forward in the 1980s and has had a vagabond coaching career which began in 1992 with his Blackhawks.

After sitting out five years, he took over the Kings midway through the 2011-12 season — and won a Stanley Cup. Now, he has a chance to become a legend with two Cup wins.

A good night's sleep

Earlier in this interminable postseason, Rangers head coach Alain Vigneault complained about the brutal scheduling in the first two rounds.

Meanwhile, the Kings were staging a miraculous comeback from down 3-0 to the Sharks. No team feels entirely refreshed in early June, but the Kings are the first team to go to a Game 7 in the first three rounds and make

Old friend, new enemy

The Kings acknowledge they would probably not be in the Stanley Cup Final if not for Marian Gaborik.

Los Angeles traded for the right wing at the trade deadline and he has 19 points (12 goals and seven assists) in 21 postseason games.

Rangers fans were torn on the deal which sent Gaborik — a talented underachiever during his tenure in New York — to the Blue Jack-ets in April 2013. But the trade's return of Derek Dorsett, Derick Brassard and John Moore has paid off for the Rangers this season.

Brassard had a tremendous regular season (45 points) on the fourth line and has carried it over to the playoffs with nine points in 18 games.

...versus strength

Why is Kreider's size going to be important? Because everyone acknowledges the Kings have a tremendous advantage in strength. Doughty may be more of a two-way defenseman, but Willie Martinez (6-foot-3), Jake Muzzin (6-foot-3) and Jeff Schultz (6-foot-6) are all built like tanks.

How little guys like St. Louis (5-foot-8) and Zuccarello (5-foot-7) negotiate that size will be huge (pun intended) for the series.

JAKE MUZZIN IS KNOWN AS A POWERFUL HITTER AT 215 POUNDS.

Underdog!

Vigneault brought out the underdog speech on Monday, so fans already know the tactic for his pregame speech. He's not wrong — Vegas has already installed the Kings as plus-150 in the series — but this shouldn't be a landslide.

The theme may be more of a commentary on Vigneault and how much his team believes in him, versus former coach John Tortorella. There's no question the Rangers have bought in so far.

VIGNEAULT LOST IN HIS ONLY OTHER CUP APPEARANCE.

the Stanley Cup.

The Rangers have only played one fewer game though — finishing up the Eastern Conference finals in six games.

Whoever looks fresher could determine the winner.

Backup issues

Talbot's status still unknown going forward

Backup goaltender Cam Talbot traveled with the Rangers to Los Angeles on Tuesday, but his status is still up in the air.

He has not practiced the past few days and is only been ruled out with an undisclosed injury. All head coach Alain Vigneault would say is Talbot is "day-to-day." Then again, the Rangers hope they won't need him. METRO

Getting off easier

Carcillo suspension reduced

Rangers left wing Daniel Carcillo may play a role in the Stanley Cup Final after all.

The NHL reduced his 10-game suspension to six games on Tuesday. Carcillo will be available beginning in Game 4. Previously, he only could've been used if the series went seven games. METRO

Stanley Cup loss fresh in Vigneault's thoughts

NHL playoffs. The Rangers coach fell one game short of a Cup in his effort against Boston three years ago.

Rangers head coach Alain Vigneault's remembers the all-encompassing pain of the Canucks' Stanley Cup Final loss to the Bruins in 2011.

"When I lost Game 7 there was a lot of crying from my part," the former Canucks coach told reporters Monday, after his team's final practice before flying to Los Angeles for Game 1 of the 2014 Stanley Cup Final. "My girls were there, I had some friends there, so it was real emotional, real hard."

Vigneault hopes he and his team will not experience those raw emotions after the Stanley Cup Final, which begins Wednesday night at the Staples Center against the Western Conference champion Kings.

The Kings entered the playoffs as the league's best puck-possession team and rank sixth in the playoffs accord-

"He has been playing well the whole playoffs. He's played a huge part for them. That's why they're in [the Final]."

Henrik Lundqvist, goaltender, on his former teammate Marian Gaborik, now with the Kings ing to the analytics site extraskater.com. The Rangers rank sixth and eighth, respectively.

"L.A. is defensively sound, great goaltending. They play four lines," Vigneault said. "They've been there before and they've won. They went from the lowest-scoring team to make it into the playoffs to the highest-scoring team right now."

"They have definitely got size and they added speed and scoring when they added [Marian] Gaborik. They are the real thing and they are the real deal so it's a challenge."

But the Rangers have not advanced to this point just to play patsy — not when the tangible reward for a lifetime's work is just four wins away.

"Any team you play at this time of year is a good

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Giants (37-20)

The Giants continue to roll and have separated themselves from the rest of the NL as they have now won eight of their last 10. It isn't just one strong area in which the Giants are excelling as they're among the best in the league both offensively and from the mound. They have the second-best team ERA (3.02) in the NL.

No. 2

Athletics (35-22)

Oakland is not just winning a bunch of games, it is dominating and blowing away its competition. It's tough to find a flaw with this team.

No. 3

Brewers (35-23)

After struggling a bit the past few weeks, the Brewers have picked it up, winning seven of their last 10 games to open up a five-game lead.

No. 4

Blue Jays (34-24)

The Blue Jays had an unreal month of May to climb to the top of the AL East and have won eight of their last 10 games.

No. 5

Tigers (31-22)

The good news: The Tigers are in first place in the AL Central. The bad news: They aren't playing good baseball as they've lost six of their last 10.

No. 6

Braves (31-25)

Although it may not be the most exciting baseball, the Braves are consistent year-in and year-out, especially their pitching staff.

No. 7

Dodgers (31-28)

Unfortunately for the Dodgers, they are in the NL West with the powerful Giants running away with the division.

No. 8

Angels (30-26)

The Angels have been solid the past few weeks, but with the way Oakland's playing the Halos have now fallen 4.5 games behind in the division.

No. 9

Cardinals (30-28)

St. Louis has lost two straight and six of its last 10 to now fall five games behind the Central leading Brewers as it seeks to get back in the playoff hunt.

No. 10

Yankees (29-27)

New York dropped a pair to start the week and allowed Toronto to open up a four-game lead in the AL East.

No. 11

Rangers (29-28)

Texas is playing better baseball of late, but is still third in the AL West behind the Angels and the soaring A's. Texas has won six of their last 10 games.

No. 12

Mariners (29-28)

Seattle has won three games in a row, but because of such a poor start it is tied for third in the AL West, six games out of first.

No. 13

Orioles (28-27)

Although the Orioles have won two in a row, it came following a four-game losing streak, which has them in third in the AL East.

No. 14

Marlins (28-28)

It has been an up-and-down season for the Marlins as it seems as though they will have one good week, followed by a bad week.

No. 15

Rockies (28-28)

It hasn't been a strong stretch for the Rockies as they have lost four straight and eight of their last 10 games to drop to third place in the NL West.

No. 16

Mets (28-29)

The Mets are playing much better baseball of late, winning seven of their last 10 to climb back into the NL East.

NCAA. Alabama gives Nick Saban $55.2M extension until 2022

Nick Saban probably doesn't need the money, but he's getting more anyway.

The Alabama head football coach has been approved by the school for a $55.2 million salary which will extend through 2022.

Saban was already the highest-paid coach in college football, but he's now set to make about $6.5 million per season.

Saban led the Crimson Tide to BCS titles in 2009, 2011 and 2012. He also holds a title from his time at LSU in 2003.

He previously flirted with the NFL and the Dolphins, but appears content to stay in college for the long term. He also had a series of assistant coach salaries approved. METRO

Marino vacates

Dan Marino pulls out of lawsuit over concussions

Former Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino will not be involved in a lawsuit over concussions after all.

The former All-Pro had said Monday he would join a class-action lawsuit filed by dozens of former players in which they claim the league intentionally ignored the seriousness of head injuries suffered during their career.

But Marino pulled out of the suit on Tuesday. ESPN reported the former player feared the suit might hinder his career with the league, or Dolphins, going forward. METRO

Should have fewer bathroom stops

If the signs of overactive bladder (OAB) are becoming an all too familiar pattern, it may be time for a new direction.
